Declassified: Biden Admin Labeled COVID Dissenters 'Domestic Violent Extremists'

by Tyler Durden Saturday, May 24, 2025 - 10:50 AM

Authored by Steve Watson via Modernity.news,

Newly declassified intelligence records have revealed that the Biden administration labeled Americans who opposed the COVID-19 vaccination and mask mandates as "Domestic Violent Extremists." ...

The documents, which were declassified by DNI Tulsi Gabbard, show that they cutely abbreviated the term to 'DVEs'.

Catherine Herridge, one of the journalists who obtained the records, notes "The designation created an "articulable purpose" for FBI or other government agents to open an "assessment" of individuals."

A former FBI agent told Herridge that this "is often the first step toward a formal investigation."

Herridge further reports:

The report... claims that "anti government or anti authority violent extremists," specifically militias, "characterize COVID-19 vaccination and mask mandates as evidence of government overreach." A sweeping range of COVID narratives, the report states, "have resonated" with DVEs "motivated by QAnon."

The FBI, Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and the National Counterterrorism Center (NCTC) coauthored the December 13, 2021 intelligence product whose title reads, "DVEs and Foreign Analogues May React Violently to COVID-19 Mitigation Mandates."

The report cites criticism of mandates as "prominent narratives" related to violent extremism. These narratives "include the belief that COVID-19 vaccines are unsafe, especially for children, are part of a government or global conspiracy to deprive individuals of their civil liberties and livelihoods, or are designed to start a new social or political order.

"It's a way they could go to social media companies and say, 'You don't want to propagate domestic terrorism so you should take down this content,'" said former FBI agent Steve Friend.

Wow. Those violent extremists believing that COVID vaccines were potentially unsafe for young people.

It's not like they were 100% correct and big pharma is being forced to admit this is exactly the case....

Teaching Critical Thinking, Or Manufacturing Consent? How Universities

Rebranded Obedience as Solidarity during Covid

Claudia Chaufan, MD, PHD Jul 06, 2025

Introduction

When the World Health Organization announced a viral pandemic in early 2020, universities around the world swiftly adopted a wide range of emergency measures. These included remote learning, social distancing protocols, and eventually, vaccine mandates. On the face of it, the policies followed the precautionary principle: better to be safe than sorry. But as time passed, it became clear that these measures were not — or at least not only — about safety. They came to signal a profound transformation, leaving their mark on universities as institutions meant to serve as spaces of intellectual exchange, critical inquiry, and democratic deliberation.

Over the past years, I have studied the Covid-19 policy response in the postsecondary sector, with a focus on Canada. I conducted a critical policy analysis of the expert literature on “vaccine uptake” among students<sup>1</sup>, in-depth interviews with students<sup>2</sup>, and a scoping review of academic governance in the Covid era in five Canadian postsecondary institutions<sup>3</sup>, while reflecting on, and writing about, my own experience teaching through the crisis<sup>4</sup>.

The conclusion I have drawn is sobering: the policy response in academia was not simply a reaction to a perceived public health crisis but the broader entrenchment of a culture of self-righteousness and coercion that stifled dissent, sidelined collegial governance, and subjected students to subtle yet powerful forms of intellectual and moral pressure. And these were not temporary errors made under stress - they were institutional betrayals to the normative role of universities, betrayals whose lessons demand reflection. At stake was not simply health policy but the manufacture of consent - paradoxically within institutions whose normative mission includes to foster independent thought. What follows is the story of how I came to this view....

Intimidation and Censorship — A Doctor’s Personal Account of the Pandemic

Analysis by Dr. Joseph Mercola July 13, 2025

> Dr. Bowden used rapid PCR (polymerase chain reaction) tests and early interventions like monoclonal antibodies and ivermectin to successfully treat over 6,000 patients during the COVID-19 pandemic

- > Government agencies and medical boards coordinated to suppress effective treatments while promoting expensive alternatives through an $11.5 billion propaganda campaign
- > Hospitals indiscriminately used ventilators and harmful protocols, with some cases resembling euthanasia rather than proper patient care during the peak of the pandemic
- > Athletic sudden deaths rose from 29 to 290 annually, with myocarditis cases rising significantly, yet politicians remain silent due to pharmaceutical industry influence
- > Despite growing political support for medical autonomy, powerful medical organizations continue suppressing free speech and patient choice regarding treatments

In a three-hour interview with Joe Rogan, Dr. Mary Talley Bowden recounts her experience in the trenches during the COVID-19 pandemic. While she has saved thousands of lives, the establishment vilified her by refusing to use treatments they endorsed. I encourage you to watch the entire episode, as it's an eye-opening story of what went on behind the scenes....

Professor Matthias Desmet, renowned clinical psychologist from the University of Ghent and author of the groundbreaking book on mass formation The Psychology of Totalitarianism, shares profound insights into the psychological dynamics behind the rise of totalitarianism in our modern world.

Expect to learn how our materialist, rationalist worldview has led to unprecedented loneliness and disconnection, how propaganda and mass formation work together in a "diabolic pact" between elites and masses, why digital technology reduces human resonance by 95%, and how the COVID crisis demonstrated the power of mass formation in action.

This powerful conversation offers both a warning about our current trajectory and a blueprint for maintaining our humanity in an increasingly mechanistic world. Essential listening for anyone

Mattias Desmet on Our Grave Situation

Peak Prosperity Dec 2, 2021 Podcasts

Professor Mattias Desmet talks about his work that connects past historical episodes of what is called "Mass Formation" (aka Mass Psychosis) and current events. The risks are as grave as they come. Unless a few brave and courageous people are willing to stand up and say "I don't agree!" history suggests that we will end up with a fully totalitarian outcome.

That is a dark path. It inevitably leads to mass casualties and atrocities. Eventually all totalitarian systems end in their own destruction.

My position is "it doesn't have to be this way." We can do better. Let's avoid a future of atrocities and the complete destruction of our way of life. Unfortunately, those caught up in the Mass Formation event cannot see the larger or wider implications of their actions. They are very much like a hypnotized person with their field of view narrowed down to a singular threat or risk they have been told is the one-and-only threat they must conquer.

So all of their attention goes there. It focusses down. Nothing else matters. Eventually they transfer their anger and rage at that enemy – which is Covid today – upon a more relatable a nearby object. Perhaps their neighbor. Perhaps the unvaccinated. Perhaps immigrants who are stealing their jobs, or those who aren't taking Climate Change seriously enough.

With that transference, the path has been laid to re-trod some of the most awful and inhumane periods of history. We're there again and our own integrity demands that we do what we can to avoid going any further down that path.

In this episode Mattias tells us what can be done. We must never resort to violence. We must be courageous and speak up. We must hold everyone with compassion. But most of all, we must speak up.

Contesting the “Nature” Of Conformity: What Milgram and Zimbardo's Studies Really Show

S Alexander Haslam 1,*, Stephen D Reicher 2

PMCID: PMC3502509 PMID: 23185132

A re-analysis of classic psychology studies suggests that tyranny does not result from blind conformity to rules and roles, but may involve identification with authorities who represent vicious acts as virtuous.

Abstract

Understanding of the psychology of tyranny is dominated by classic studies from the 1960s and 1970s: Milgram's research on obedience to authority and Zimbardo's Stanford Prison Experiment. Supporting popular notions of the banality of evil, this research has been taken to show that people conform passively and unthinkingly to both the instructions and the roles that authorities provide, however malevolent these may be. Recently, though, this consensus has been challenged by empirical work informed by social identity theorizing. This suggests that individuals' willingness to follow authorities is conditional on identification with the authority in question and an associated belief that the authority is right.

Studies of independence and conformity: I. A minority of one against a unanimous majority. [Stanley Milgram was his assistant at Princeton]

Asch, S. E. (1956). Studies of independence and conformity: I. A minority of one against a unanimous majority. Psychological Monographs: General and Applied, 70(9), 1–70.

<https://doi.org/10.1037/h0093718>

The investigations described in this series are concerned with the conditions of independence and lack of independence in the face of group pressure. The abstract temper of present-day theory and investigation in this region rests to a considerable degree on a neglect of the cognitive and emotional experiences that are part of the individual's psychological field. The understanding of social influences will require the study of a wide range of conditions and of the interrelated operations of different psychological functions. A group of seven to nine individuals was gathered in a classroom to take part in what appeared to be a simple experiment in visual discrimination. The subjects were all male, white college students, ranging in age from 17 to 25; the mean age was 20. For certain purposes a large number of critical subjects was required for the present experiment. The present report is based on a total of 123 subjects. The task consisted of the comparison of a standard line with three other lines, one of which was equal in length to the standard. We investigated some of the conditions responsible for independence and lack of independence in the face of arbitrary group pressure. To this end we produced a disagreement between a group and one individual member about a clear and simple issue of fact. The interview, which followed the experimental session, provided qualitative evidence concerning the effects produced by the majority, The particular properties of the experimental situation and their relation to more usual social contradictions were described. ## Factors That Influence Conformity

At the conclusion of the Asch experiments, participants were asked why they had gone along with the rest of the group. In most cases, the students stated that while they knew the rest of the group was wrong, they did not want to risk facing ridicule. A few of the participants suggested that they actually believed the other members of the group were correct in their answers.

These results suggest that conformity can be influenced both by a need to fit in and a belief that other people are smarter or better informed....

Given the level of conformity seen in Asch's experiments, conformity can be even stronger in real-life situations where stimuli are more ambiguous or more difficult to judge.

Asch went on to conduct further experiments in order to determine which factors influenced how and when people conform. He found that:

Conformity tends to increase when more people are present. However, there is little change once the group size goes beyond four or five people.

Conformity also increases when the task becomes more difficult. In the face of uncertainty, people turn to others for information about how to respond.

Conformity increases when other members of the group are of a higher social status. When people view the others in the group as more powerful, influential, or knowledgeable than themselves, they are more likely to go along with the group.

Conformity tends to decrease, however, when people are able to respond privately. Research has also shown that conformity decreases if people have support from at least one other individual in a group.

The CIA Doctors: Human Rights Violations by American Psychiatrists

Colin A. Ross

The C.I.A. Doctors provides proof based on 15,000 pages of documents obtained from the CIA through the Freedom of Information Act that there have been pervasive, systematic violations of human rights by American psychiatrists over the last 65 years. Author Dr. Colin Ross proves that the Manchurian Candidate superspy is fact, not fiction. Experiments conducted by psychiatrists to create amnesia, new identities, hypnotic access codes and new memories in the minds of experimental subjects are described from the doctors' own publications. The C.I.A. Doctors proves extensive violations of human rights funded by the CIA and the military and conducted by American psychiatrists in North America, perpetrated not by a few renegade doctors, but by leading psychiatrists, psychologists, pharmacologists, neurosurgeons and medical schools.

Father, Son and CIA

Harvey Weinstein MD

James Lorimer Limited, Publishers, 1988 - Biography & Autobiography - 265 pages

When Harvey Weinstein was a child, he watched in horror as his father sank further and further into depression and mental disease.

Years later, after himself becoming a psychiatrist, Weinstein was even more horrified to learn that his father's treatment at Montreal's prestigious Allan Memorial Institute constituted a savage regime of drug and shock therapies and mind control experiments. Lou Weinstein's mind had been systematically destroyed. Destroyed, incredibly, in service of diabolical research projects funded by the CIA and the Canadian government.

Father, Son and CIA is Harvey Weinstein's painful but moving story of that discovery, and of his efforts to bring the CIA to account for the terrible consequences of its reckless experimentation.

Poisoner in Chief: Sidney Gottlieb and the CIA Search for Mind Control

Stephen Kinzer (Author) September 10, 2019

The bestselling author of All the Shah's Men and The Brothers tells the astonishing story of the man who oversaw the CIA's secret drug and mind-control experiments of the 1950s and '60s.

The visionary chemist Sidney Gottlieb was the CIA's master magician and gentlehearted torturer—the agency's "poisoner in chief." As head of the MK-ULTRA mind control project, he directed brutal experiments at secret prisons on three continents. He made pills, powders, and potions that could kill or maim without a trace—including some intended for Fidel Castro and other foreign leaders. He paid prostitutes to lure clients to CIA-run bordellos, where they were secretly dosed with mind-altering drugs. His experiments spread LSD across the United States, making him a hidden godfather of the 1960s counterculture. For years he was the chief supplier of spy tools used by CIA officers around the world.

Stephen Kinzer, author of groundbreaking books about U.S. clandestine operations, draws on new documentary research and original interviews to bring to life one of the most powerful unknown Americans of the twentieth century. Gottlieb's reckless experiments on "expendable" human subjects destroyed many lives, yet he considered himself deeply spiritual. He lived in a remote cabin without running water, meditated, and rose before dawn to milk his goats.

During his twenty-two years at the CIA, Gottlieb worked in the deepest secrecy. Only since his death has it become possible to piece together his astonishing career at the intersection of extreme science and covert action. Poisoner in Chief reveals him as a clandestine conjurer on an epic scale.
